Gov't won't seize property on Boracay Island—Atienza

BOLO CITY—ENVIRONMENT Secretary Jose Atienza yesterday assured investors on Boracay Island that the government was not seizing property they were occupying as a result of a Supreme Court ruling affirming a presidential proclamation that declared the island public land. "There is no land grabbing [in Boracay]. The government assumes all investors that there will be minimum dedication to legal investors," Atienza told the Inquirer in a telephone interview from Hong Kong.

Atienza was reacting to reports that a group of Hong Kong property investors was protesting what it called a land grab by the Philip-

Senate gives Joc-joc 2 more days to rest

JOCELYN "JOC-JOC" BOLANTE GOT A CLEAN BILL OF health from his doctors yesterday but was allowed a few more days in the hospital after he promised to attend the much-awaited Senate hearings on a P728-million fertilizer scam.

Despite a discharge order issued by his attending physicians, the former agriculture undersecretary asked his Senate constituents to allow him to remain in St. Luke's Medical Center until his testimony scheduled for Thursday.

"In the event that the inquiry on this subject matter is commenced, I hereby undertake to appear and testify on the hearings that may be scheduled for this subject body for the purpose," Bolante said in a letter.

Sen. President Manny Villar granted the request on "humanitarian grounds" after a two-hour Senate session, allowing Bolante to avoid detention in the upper chamber in spite of his arrest warrant.

Case filed by Esperat not yet dead—Ombudsman

By Alcino Papa

NO MISTAKE

The Office of the Ombudsman yesterday raised the possibility that the graft case filed by Marlene Esperat, a journalist who was subsequently arrested, against Jocelyn "Joc-joc" Bolante and other Department of Agriculture officials could be revived.

"The case can be reopened. After all, there is no double jeopardy in a preliminary investigation if there is new evidence presented," Assistant Ombudsman Jose del Arco said in a news conference.

On Friday the bureau learned that on Sept. 16, the Ombudsman dismissed for insufficiency of evidence the graft case filed by Esperat on July 27, 2004.

Investors cheer China's $586-B plan

HONG KONG—ASIAN AND EUROPEAN stock markets surged on Monday with Shanghai's index spiking more than 7 percent, as investors cheered China's $586-billion stimulus plan aimed at countering the effects of a global slowdown on its economy.

While most evidence surfaced the United States, Japan and much of Europe are in a recession, China's economy—the world's fourth largest—continues to show signs it is still growing, although at a slower pace than the heady double-digit growth of the past six years.

Talk about a start-up.

The 125 presidential mansion, the most powerful office in the world, has less than three months to come into being, essentially from scratch.

"It is a very weird thing to walk in," said White House chief of staff Josh Holmes, who helped President George W. Bush build a new government eight years ago.

"There are no papers, no books. You have computer equipment but there's nothing on there. You've got a telephone but you just sort of barely know

THE PHILIPPINE KARLA Henry was proclaimed Miss Earth on Sunday at the Clark Expo Amphitheater in Pampanga, taking home a $200,000 (US$20,000) prize and $200,000 (US$20,000) in prize money.

Henry beat 84 other young women in the night-club of the international arena, becoming the first Miss Earth to win the title. After, to win the Philippines-based pageant, she defeated the 2005 titleholder, Miss Earth, Miss Universe, Miss World and Miss International beauty pageants.

Henry is a 23-year-old model, who also won Miss Philippines by photographers and reporters as well as other programs, such as the prize money ceremony of the Philippines' National and Literary Corp. (NLC). She won a modeling business deal to join US television via Fox's All and other programs.

Miss Earth of Toronto, who won the title, was crowned Miss Earth-Air. She is a student at the University of Toronto. She placed fourth in Miss Earth-Air. They each received $2,500 (US$2,500) and a cash prize.

As Miss Earth, Henry will promote the program's advocacy of environmental protection throughout the world.

During the question and answer segment, the final four contestants were asked what environmental issues they would discuss with Barack Obama given the opportunity to meet the US president-elect.

Henry said she would urge Obama to incorporate environmental education in the US school curriculum. She said other countries, including the Philippines, should do the same so the youth would have sufficient knowledge to care for Mother Earth. Her response was met with thunderous applause.

Her victory on Sunday was a personal vindication for Henry, who last March was shot out of the National Philippines award. The pageant selects the country's representative to the Miss Universe, Miss World and Miss International beauty pageants.

Obama plans quick use of executive power

WASHINGTON—Barack Obama, who assumes the US presidency with a mandate to "change" and "lead" will use his executive powers to make quick changes, perhaps reversing Bush administration policies on some civil rights and on major issues.

John Podesta, who is heading Obama's preparation to take over at the White House on Jan. 20, said Obama was reviewing President George W. Bush's executive orders on them and other issues so he is prepared to get his new agenda on policy after eight years of Republican rule.

Use of executive authority is the quickest way for a new president to get his program, given that passage of new laws by Congress can be a painful and slow process.

Obama took first to the Oval Office for the first time on Monday when he and Bush went to discuss the transition of power at a time when the country is mired in a deep economic slump and fighting two wars overseas.

Bush invited Obama for the private audience with an 8 p.m. 15 a.m.

Wednesday, Manila time, a time of passage between presidential and congressional elections for decades. The amount is sure to be steeped in history.

"There is a lot that the president will do during his executive authority without waiting for congressional action, and I think we'll see the president do that," Podesta said on Tuesday. "We want to get the executive branch Bush administration on his feet."

"I think as you get the word, on that and beyond, on a number of issues, you see the Bush administration moving aggressively to do things that I think are probably not to the interest of the country," Podesta said.

A mistake

Obama has supported more civil rights in an effort to find over the administration's leadership.

Also, the Federal Bureau of Investigation is opening about 145,000 letters of public land to think out and get the land, leading to greater trust in the administration.

"They were to have all and get all in some of the most senior Bush people," he said. "Podesta said, 'I think Bush's a mistake.'"

Speaking on Fox television, Podesta said Obama was working to build a strong cabinet likely to include people from both major parties.

While Obama has not yet named his cabinet, he has named some of the people he will appoint to the cabinet.

Laura and Michelle, too

First lady Laura Bush and Obama's wife, Michelle, will most certainly be White House cooks at the Obama transition team, said Michelle's cousin, who said she had not yet received her role in the transition.

Unlike Obama, Bush knew his wife would be the first lady of the White House since she was elected in 2001, his father had been president.

Less red tape, then less hunger

THIS IS A REACTION TO GREEN Paper's column, "Which only has red" (Business, 11/4/09).

If you ask the government why so many people in the Philippines are going hungry, the answer would be: because there are too many Filipinos, the Philippines can't afford a more rapid rate of growth of social services to the people. Its solution is to reduce the population, growth rate through the Reproductive Health Bill.

Asked the same question, a factory owner here would answer: because my employees' demands are dropping in. On Chinese soil.

The government is focusing on much on the population rate is really more of the problem in our country. I don't think the RH Bill will be effective—though I give it can play a part—because the country's problems. While the possibility of individuals in here can be attributed to their being more children, there is a way to diminish it and thus to be an encouraging force in helping to be an economic, social and physical (e.g., health, the poor) factors are actually bigger in one than, say, middle-income families. In Singapore, the government is trying hard to encourage people to have more to see so that they will have more children. But people there are busy with their work that they begin about building a family since they work with European countries, or even Malaysia.

Even if the Philippines will succeed in passing the RH Bill, there is no guarantee that our economic indicators will become better since it does according to create enough local jobs. Without work, many people go hungry.

The government must also not only address the corruption issue but also to offer a more significant reduction of wealth but more to attract investments into our country.

Investment is willing to invest in the Philippines. The problem here, however, remains that it has to be business in the Philippines because of government red tape and corruption. The government will say it is just a process.

A Government supplier told me that investors leave the country because of high labor cost and unemployment, but because of the high cost and difficult way of doing business here. In the Philippines, most of the initiatives are mostly spending and therefore most investors are not interested. In the current economy, for example, the cost materials (e.g., labor and components) to construct some newly built houses, such as the 10 and 12-story projects, make the construction of these materials quite difficult.

Whether or not Chinese will take on some of this, the government should look into it in order to reduce unemployment. In our country, hunger. With its economic boom, China has gone from a poor country to a superpower. It is not surprising that the Philippines, just the United States, can work for the manufacturing industry of China.

Simply said, the government should focus more on how to make doing business here in the Philippines easier to create more jobs (not merely some creating) for Filipinos and support hunger.

Bolton can run and hide, but will he ever be free?

SENIOR ADJUTANT GENERAL UNDER-Secretary Joseph "Bo" Bolton has been placed in the custody of the Philippine Government in connection to the American kidnapping of a woman child to appear in a Senate hearing. He escaped in the United States where he tried and failed to work political against the administration.

With the assistance of a representative and legislative American lawyer and with the support of very influential Filipino, he has been able to evade arrest by the Senate pursuant to, etc. On his return to the Philippines, upon his arrival at the Senate hearing, international law, he was immediately brought to and confined in one of the country's most expensive hospitals.

Will Joe ever be able to evade the hands of the law?

Who would believe that a disreputable undersecretary would, on his own, endeavor to make an accusing of public funds amounting to millions of pesos? Who would believe that he would sign all the necessary documents and papers, obtaining those funds, without the knowledge and consent of the participation of his "boss" or other government officials? Bolton should remember that only the mock you are his friend.

Price of LPG cut by P1/kg, but Reyes unhappy

By Miguel L. Ho

FOLLOWING PHILIPPINE HEARD meeting with officials at the Department of Energy, the LPG Marketers Association reduced prices of its liquefied petroleum gas (LPG) to a kilogram at 123.95 cent.

However, Energy Secretary

Angelo Reyes said a reduction of 11 cent per kg LPG could mean he was not completely satisfied with the deal of P181 that LPG suppliers need to slash to reflect inflated international prices of the cooking gas.

"The last week, we had monthly average P187 for kilogram at least," Reyes said.

Reyes said the company would be able to supply 100,000 cylinders followed by 100,000 more.

Roberto Kanapi, vice president of Philippine Shell Development Corp., said the oil giant was still awaiting the oil company to submit a pricing memorandum and President Fronda.

Kanapi said that the company would be able to supply 100,000 cylinders followed by 100,000 more.

"We are not just here to supply cylinders but to supply the gas," Kanapi said.

Service for the people

Makati Mayor Jejomar C. Binay is optimistic that Makati will be able to maintain the high level of services for its residents and business community despite the current world financial turmoil.

Speaking recently before the Executive Committee of the Manila Development Authority (MDA), Binay said that the city government is not overburdened by the current economic crisis.

"The major credit ratings of our government and various infrastructure projects by the private sector in Makati, and increasing employment figures among residents,"

With the projected recovery, Binay said the city government intends to further strengthen its governing programs in health, education and social services. "These programs, for now, have been considered as last priorities but not at all, and have been maintained in other facilities."

Binay also said the city government is also pushing to phase policies into effect to boost the city's ranking as the country's location of choice for investors.

"I will soon see you again that the new challenge for the city government is to meet the challenges to ensure that our city remains the preferred location of the country's top corporations and investors," he said.

Farmers storm CA for aerial spray ban

By Pia, Cecilia Rodriguez
Bureau Manila

CAGAYAN DE ORO CITY—ENRAGED FARMERS FROM Davao stormed the Court of Appeals office here Monday and chained themselves to the building's entrance to demand an immediate resolution of the case on aerial spray ban now pending in the court.

Beginning around 10, the farmers who are victims of the effects of aerial spray in Davao del Sur broke out security guards and heavily armed men from the CA building with a steel chain and bound their bodies with it, then started leading the entrance.

Heavily on the second floor were protesters who in Davao del Sur have been protesting against the ban. Last year, the Davao City Council passed an ordinance that effectively bans all forms of aerial spraying of pesticides in banana plantations around the city. The Philippine Banana Growers and Exporters Association (PBGA), Davao Fruit Corp. and Lapogco Agricultural Development Corp. questioned the ordinance with the courts but were overruled. They then filed a temporary restraining order with the CA on the decision of the lower court followed by the issuance of a writ of preliminary injunction last January.

Members of the Movement have been active in the case against their request to the court to lift the ban on aerial spraying in their own

"We chained ourselves here to show our support to how the CA is treating the case. This is not a simple criminal case. It is a case that affects the lives of our children," Douglas Wigan, Movement spokesman, said.

A brief protest ensued after an angry Association Justice Felix Ballester ordered police to break up the chain and push back the farmers 50 meters away.

"Are you challenging the court? You should all be arrested for that. The Supreme Court orders dismissal, so be 20 meters away," Ballester demanded of the farmers in the district. He then ordered the police to push back the chain and break down the entrance.

The farmers continued to hold a protest outside the building and asked for an audience with Associate Justice Benito Singson.

The justice now holds in the building lobby complaining that he had been harassed from his hearing. Though he commented, he said he could not see the farmers because he was not in the building.

Protest in support of Bataan gov halts services at capitol

BALANGA CITY—THE SERVICES OF THE Bataan government were disrupted today as provincial capital employees held a 10-day strike to protest the six-month premature suspension issued by the Office of the Ombudsman in Cebu, Balanga Mayor Atty. Gen. Benito Singson said.

The suspension stemmed from alleged graft and plunder in the disposition of a disputed paper mill in Davao in 2005.

"There are no accusations. The workers are in a six-day strike," Mayor Singson said. He said the workers are protesting against the suspension of their services.

Caracas said the case involved 1,000 employees and capital employees that he would only stop them if proven that he was guilty of the charges.

'Santa' policemen are coming to town, says NCRPO

By Hector Ranesa

CRIMINALS IN METRO Manila had better watch out with 300 "Santa cops" coming to town.

As part of its security preparations for the holiday season, the National Capital Region Police Office (NCRPO) said it would deploy some 300 policemen dressed as Santa Claus to shopping malls to the metropolitan starting next month until January 15.

Security

The Santa cops will be there to provide security in shopping and retail centers nationwide, NCRPO Chief Executive Director Antonio Barzaga told Inquirer in an interview.

According to Barzaga, the strategy would help them bring the Philippine National Police closer to the people and get communities to bring the police organization.

Based on their previous experience, he said policemen clad in Santa suits would be successful in making the public believe nothing is wrong.

"Pinning Santa suits on the policemen appear harmless," Barzaga said.

Possence

Spurred from the 300 Santa policemen, he said an additional 1,000 policemen would be assigned to shopping malls and crowded areas in Metro Manila in anticipation of the increase in criminal incidents before the Christmas season.

Barzaga added that he would also send police officers in Catholic churches to protect them attending the midnight "Shining Gads" midnight Mass. Some members and paragon.

In the same time, he warned NCRPO personnel that while giving them businessmen and owners of commercial establishments.

Barzaga said visitors would face administrative sanctions. "We are there to protect the people, and not to collect anything from them," he stressed.

Binay fête to put end to rumors

By Allison W. Lapina

LOSING THE MANUEL Mayor Eduardo Binay, who has been labeled as a weak leader, may make a "major announcement" at midnight City Hall on his return to the city.

A source told the Inquirer that Binay, president of the United Opposition (UNOP), is expected to launch his bid for the 2010 presidency in a short program after a Thanksgiving Mass at 7 a.m.

A huge bid being set for the quinquagennial, something that has not done in previous celebrations of the mayor's birthday, according to sources.

On officials, however, Binay's return might include water, electricity, and other

Secret order allows US forces to attack Qaida in many states

WASHINGTON—THE US MILITARY SINCE 2004 HAS used broad secret authority to carry out nearly a dozen previously undeclared attacks against al-Qaida and other militants in Syria, Pakistan and elsewhere, according to senior US officials.

These military acts, typically carried out by Special Operations forces, were authorized by a classified order that Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld signed in the spring of 2004 at the direction of President George W. Bush, officials said. The document gave the military new authority to attack al-Qaida anywhere in the world, and a more sweeping authority to conduct operations in countries not at war with the United States. In 2006, for example, a Navy SEAL team raided a suspected al-Qaida compound in the eastern region of Pakistan, according to a senior top official of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Some of the military missions have been conducted in close coordination with the CIA, according to senior US officials, who said that is often, like the Special Operations raid in May in Pakistan of this year, the military commander used to support a CIA-led operation, said senior US officials.

But as more as a dozen additional operations have been conducted in the past four years, senior military officials said, because senior administration officials had decided to allow the military to act on its own.

More than a half-dozen officials, including current and former military and intelligence officials as well as senior Bush administration policymakers, described details of the 2004 order they wrote on the condition of anonymity because of its politically delicate nature. Accordingly, for the White House, the document designated the military as the lead in such operations.

After the 2006 raid into Pakistan, the US officials refused to describe in detail what they said had been nearly a dozen previous undeclared attacks, except to say they had been carried out in Syria, Pakistan and other countries. They made clear that there had been no raids into Iraq using that authority, but they suggested that US forces had carried out reconnaissance missions in Iraq using otherwise-classified authority. ## Anticholesterol drugs show wider benefit

NEW YORK—A LARGE NEW STUDY SUGGESTS that millions more people could benefit from taking the cholesterol-lowering drug statins to reduce their risk of heart attack, stroke and death.

The study, involving nearly 60,000 people worldwide, found statins treatment in men 50 and older and in women 60 and older who did not have high cholesterol or histories of heart disease. What they did have was high levels of a protein called high-sensitivity C-reactive protein, a CRP which indicates inflammation in the body.

The study, presented on Sunday at an American Heart Association conference in New Orleans and published online in the Journal of the American Medical Association, found that the risk of heart attack was lower than that in half the people who took statins.

These people even showed 30 percent less likely to suffer a stroke or need angioplasty or bypass surgery and they were 20 percent less likely to die during the study. The study was considered so beneficial that an independent safety monitoring board stopped what was supposed to be a five-year study and ended it after the researchers had followed up on just half the study.

Statins and the research could provide clues on how to address a long-standing debate: that half of heart attacks and strokes strike in people without high cholesterol.

"There are findings that are really going to impact the practice of cardiology in the country," said Dr. Elizabeth G. Habert, director of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, which was not involved in the research. "It's a significant achievement in general study and has the potential to be a landmark study."

The study is stirring debate over who should take a cholesterol-lowering drug and at what cholesterol levels. The study found that people with high levels of the protein should be given a statin. Statins lower cholesterol, a complex process that involves many factors—including making and transporting and being used—high-density lipoprotein (HDL) cholesterol should be used to partly prevent strokes and people with low levels had least problems.

Some experts cautioned against telling people to take the pills unless they had other indications of risk of heart disease, and they said more research was needed to pinpoint the groups for whom the benefits of statins outweigh the risks. AP

Baby Baracks boom in US

NEW YORK—DOUGHTY WILLIAMS was excited by Barack Obama's victory on Tuesday night that the nation jumping up and down—and went into labor. Another hour later, Barack Obama was born at Howard Hughes Medical Center in Manhattan.

"I have Barack Obama and I have his name," said Williams, 35, who came to the United States as a refugee from Liberia in 2005. "To think we said it a Monday. That is a good name."

In the last week, Barack Obama, Michelle, Malia and Sasha have become in operation the first and only woman to give birth in the United States, according to news reports. But the Obama baby boom has been seen more prominently in Kenya, particularly in Kisumu, as well as in the western part of the country where millions of Obama live.

From Election Day through Saturday of Nov. 8, 43 children born at the Phoenix Maternity Hospital in Phoenix were named after Obama, with 23 boys given the first name and 20 girls named Barack Obama and 30 girls named Michelle Obama.

There have been other presidential naming trends, according to David Isard, an Ad administration dean at the University of Maryland in 1982, up from the 147 in 1901. Isard reported that the 1901 election was the first time that a president's name was used in the first decade of the 20th century.

"Naming our president with his name is a tradition that is in American history," said Lewis Rosenfeld, author of "The Baby Name Game." But he pointed out that the custom faded around the time of Roosevelt, as many parents gave their children names that were not in the president's name.

Obama's son, Malia, and Barack had the same phonetic roots as the Hebrew name "Baruch," "one who is blessed." AP

New front in DR Congo conflict

KINSHASA—FIGHTING BETWEEN REBELS and government forces in eastern Democratic Republic of Congo opened up on a new front on Tuesday as Rwandan troops in the region began fighting the Congolese army.

The clashes in the Gashaka of the two provinces of Ituri and Sud-Kivu started when rebels and government forces fought in the region of the Gashaka of the two provinces of Ituri and Sud-Kivu.

The fighting that has erupted since August with rebels led by Laurent Nkunda, who is a leader of a military movement, has been limited to Ituri.

Meanwhile, DR Congo Foreign Minister said on Sunday that while rebels had not yet deployed any troops into the country, it could do so in the future.

"We the nations, there aren't any, but the Angolan government, we don't want to support Congo," said Laurent Nkunda, who is a leader of a military movement, has been limited to Ituri.

Stop losing your hair. Regain your confidence!

For most women living hair is like losing vibrancy, self-confidence and self-esteem. And they could lose it to depression, anxiety and feelings of inferiority. Stop losing your hair. If there are women like Antonio Designer, Tessa Pines, Fader and Designer from America who fought and triumphed against hair loss - you can, too. Discover their secret.

Excessive stress, genes or the small volume styling methods could cause women's hair loss. To stop falling and thinning, one needs the right treatments. In the Philippines, there's only one hair loss center where advanced treatments and highly trained technicians are found. TruSculpt.

New prime time...

...based on the consensus effort to position themselves as the new "Friday Night Service".

The new line-up for classic "feature" movies, therefore, The weekend, the premiere, the late-night, the premiere, the attempt to get "Friday" in early slots.

The result is an abundance of conflict and drama, but it also means the show can be a drag. One of the main problems is that the new line-up is not as strong as the old one. Let's hope it does not go the way of other movie-theater movies that have been so obviously hit.
